PROGRAM COORDINATOR

would like to return to an issue Jim Bulman raised two years ago in his President's letter. He encouraged us to think about how to do more to bring the riches of our profession to the wider audience beyond our classrooms. We complain that freshmen come to us badly prepared by the schools, but we do very little to reach out to those schools to help them do better. Two years later the problem is still with us.

As you may know there is a crisis out there in the schools. Apart from the longstanding problems of crowding, lack of materials and undercompensation, now there are simply not enough teachers. States like my own are rushing to change certification requirements so that a new graduate with a degree in criminal justice can walk into an English class and teach Hamlet. Schools of education and education departments are in an upheaval of self-examination prompted by the crisis and by the resulting competition with quick-fix, for-profit teacher preparation programs.

What does this have to do with us? Most of us are already overwhelmed with work. Even if a Shakespearean is lucky enough to have a manageable class load there are always committees, administrative jobs, and national organizations to attend to, not to mention the research for which she wants somehow to make time. Collectively too we have other responsibilities. Surely then it makes sense to concentrate on what we do best while letting the school professionals do what they do best. This powerful argument prevailed with me for years.

But we are after all in the business of educating students about literature. We have strong and, we believe, useful ideas about what it requires. Besides, no one else is solving the problem. Apart from any moral obligation to our communities, our own self interest is at stake. If nothing changes there will be no students ready for our classes except in a few ivory towers, popular scorn for which will become increasingly justified. For reasons like these the American Council on Education has recently called on college and university presidents to help transform the way teachers are taught and to make teacher preparation more central to their institutions. In other words, to make it more central to us.

What can Shakespeareans do? First, even if we do not wish to get involved in what our university is doing to prepare teachers, we can think more about the potential teachers in our own classes. Although they may constitute only a silent minority, their choice deserves respect. It is sad to realize how frequently would-be teachers hear derogatory remarks about high school teachers or are "praised" by being told that they are smart enough to do something better. Second, we can teach more about teaching—and learning—as well as about Shakespeare. We can increase their awareness of their own reading practices by being explicit about ours. I can explain WHY I chose the plays on the syllabus, their sequence, the questions I ask about them, the kinds of response I ask for, and the kind I discourage. I can even, now and then, ask students to reformulate one of their papers so that it could be presented to a high school class. Needless to say such disciplined attention to their audience and thinking process can benefit all students, not only future teachers. And what if we asked every graduate student to include a section in the dissertation that conveys the essence of its argument in a way that can be understood and appreciated by students and non-professionals?

Third, we can think about the book, Preparing a Nation's Teachers, edited by Phyllis Franklin, David Laurence and Elizabeth B. Welles for the MLA (1999). I have learned from it and recommend it highly. Fourth, we can get to know more about the teachers who are already working the schools and might welcome our collaboration. We can talk with them directly and ask how we can help. Finally, the SAA can then work collectively to try to provide such collaboration, through workshops like those we have offered in the past but perhaps also by reaching out in other ways, such as organizing Shakespeareans to run semester long reading groups for teachers in their own communities. Like Jim, I will close by asking those who have ideas about how, or whether, the SAA should address such issues, to contact me (skura@rice.edu; English Department MS-30, Rice University, P.O. Box 1892, Houston, TX 77005-1892).

REGISTRATION AND PARTICIPATION

All current members of the Shakespeare Association are welcome to register for the 29th Annual Meeting in Miami.

The meeting registration fee entitles SAA members to attend all sessions, seminars, and workshops (except workshops closed to auditors, as designated in the final program), as well as the book exhibits, annual luncheon, all coffee breaks, and the opening reception at Vizcaya on Thursday evening.

When registering, members may also purchase tickets for the Friday-evening performance of Much Ado About Nothing, the Saturday-evening performance of Shakespeare's Journey, and the Saturday-night dance sponsored by the Shakespeare Association and the Malone Society.

Guests of registered members are welcome at all major sessions, coffee breaks, and receptions. Extra tickets to the luncheon may be purchased for guests.

In addition to the Meeting Registration Form (on page 8), the bulletin includes a Membership Dues Form (on page 7). Membership dues are assessed by the calendar, not the academic year, and are therefore payable immediately—except for those whose mailing label bears a "01" in the upper right-hand corner (indicating that dues have already been paid for the year 2001). Only those who are members in good standing—i.e., paid-up members for 2001—are eligible to receive SAA mailings for the year, subscribe to journals at the SAA's discounted rates, vote in the 2001 election for SAA officers, and attend the Miami meeting.

The Membership Dues Form and the Meeting Registration Form should be completed and mailed, as appropriate, to the Shakespeare Association offices. Ballots for SAA officers should also be returned to these offices. There is no Hotel Reservation Form included in the Bulletin this year. Members should phone the Hotel Inter-Continental in Miami directly at 305-577-1000. Be sure to make reservations before 20 March, and mention that you are attending the SAA meeting, to ensure receiving the hotel's special group rate.

MEMBERSHIP BENEFITS: JOURNALS

SAA members receive deep discounts to the annual journals Shakespeare Studies, Shakespeare Survey, and Medieval and Renaissance Drama in England. To subscribe to these three journals or to Shakespeare Newsletter, consult the Membership Dues Form.

SAA members also receive a $5.00 discount off the regular subscription rates for Shakespeare Quarterly. Subscription orders should be placed directly with Toni Krieger, Circulation Manager for the Quarterly. Those phoning her at 202-675-0351 or faxing her at 202-544-4623 should be sure to mention their SAA membership in good standing.

SAA PROTOCOLS

For Seminars and Workshops

Shakespeare Association seminars and workshops are designed to serve as forums for fresh research, mutual criticism, and pedagogical and technological experimentation among members with specialized interests and areas of expertise. Each program requires advance work on the part of its members, and this work, which may include papers, bibliographies, exercises, and other exchanges, must be duplicated and circulated to the program's full membership for receipt by 21 February 2001.

It is assumed that seminars and workshops will be conducted as gatherings of professional colleagues, in an atmosphere of shared respect, and with balanced concern for both individual contributions and corporate endeavors. SAA policy is that all seminar and workshop members are entitled to receive comments on and discussion of their work, assuming that work has been submitted by the deadline and has been circulated to other members of the group. Every member of a seminar or workshop should be given a chance to speak, and no one should be allowed to monopolize the conversation. With few (announced) exceptions, seminars and workshops are open to auditors. Auditors are permitted to join the discussion only when invited to do so by the seminar or workshop leader(s), and then only for the last twenty or thirty minutes of the session, at the discretion of the leader.

For Paper Sessions

Shakespeare Association paper sessions are intended to present new research, discoveries, interpretations, and analysis to the membership at large. SAA policy provides time at the conclusion of each session for brief comments and questions from the audience. As a general rule, the chair of a session will speak for no longer than five minutes. In a three-paper session, each presenter will speak no longer than twenty-three minutes.

GRADUATE STUDENTS IN THE SAA

The Shakespeare Association of America takes pleasure in welcoming dissertation-stage graduate students to its membership. Through SAA seminars and workshops, ideas and discoveries are shared across the academic hierarchy. Each year, the Trustees of the SAA host a Continental breakfast for graduate students for the purpose of meeting their future colleagues. They also welcome the opportunity to learn of any special needs and concerns graduate students bring to the SAA.

To help graduate students reduce lodging expenses, the SAA assists those seeking roommates. Inquiries should be made by phone (410-455-6788), fax (410-455-1063), or e-mail <saa@umbc.edu>.

Students may also economize by volunteering to assist in conference administration. Those who work for eight to ten hours at the registration tables and/or special events will receive a waiver of the meeting registration fee. Although many of these positions are reserved for graduate students at the meeting's host institutions, others will be awarded on a first-come, first-recruited basis. Those interested should notify the SAA offices.

Much Ado About Nothing

Swing meets Shakespeare in the University of Miami Ring Theatre's WWII version of the timeless romantic comedy, Much Ado About Nothing, April 13-21.

Set in a USO Canteen in wartime Europe, the Ring adaptation retains nearly all of Shakespeare's language and characters while making minor textual changes to reflect the 20th-century setting. Military uniforms and fashions from 1943 along with swing music and dancing all help support the transported time and place.

True to Shakespeare, the plot still revolves primarily around Benedick and Beatrice, two bickering lovers who are now a U.S. Army Major and USO Entertainer. Dogberry, a constable in the original, is now an M.P. Sergeant. The Ring version has been adapted and will be directed by University of Miami Theatre Professor Matthew T. Gitkin, a professional ballroom dancer with special experience in swing dance. His professional acting experience includes Little Shop of Horrors and Guys and Dolls. He has acted in movies with Robin Williams, Bill Murray, Geena Davis, Susan Sarandon, and Ralph Fiennes. For Much Ado Mr. Gitkin has edited the original to shorten the playing time to under two hours. He has included renditions of 1940's hits sung by the show's USO entertainers, and he has choreographed several swing dance numbers into the production.

The University of Miami Department of Theatre Arts has BA and BFA programs in the theatre. The historic Ring Theatre has been producing in the Miami area since 1946.

The theatre is located at 1312 Miller Drive, Coral Gables, on the University of Miami campus, and is accessible from the hotel by Metro Rail.

Tickets for Much Ado are offered at a reduced rate of $8 to all who register for the SAA meeting (see page 8 of this bulletin). The SAA has reserved a limited number of seats for the performance, April 13 (Friday) at 8 p.m.

Shakespeare's Journey

Playwright Leroy Clark began research for Shakespeare's Journey in 1996. Fifteen drafts later—following a production directed by J. David Blatt at Wichita State University, a staged reading at the 1999 Region V American College Theatre Festival directed by Aaron Cabell, feedback from the Chicago Dramatists' Workshop, and a reading in New York—Shakespeare's Journey will be performed at Florida International University April 5-15.

This romantic biographical drama, written in the style of an Elizabethan play, focuses on the universal struggle between career and family. We follow Shakespeare through 16th- and 17th-century London and Stratford, meet his family and fellow players, and see him in the context of his times dealing with the major events of his life.

Critics' comments include Evan Blake's (Chicago Dramatists Workshop), who says "There is a great deal to like in this play: The subjects are fascinating; the language is wonderful—heightened, period-apt, and frequently witty; the characters interesting, believable, and often charming." Joseph Fedorko (Chicago Playwrights Workshop) claims he "can already see the tag line for the play: 'What happened AFTER Shakespeare fell in love?' I love the premise, I love the language, I really, REALLY love the theatricality." And Harry Parker (Chair of the Region V American College Theatre Festival) adds: "It is a brave work. One of the great accomplishments of the piece is the handling of the language. What appealed to me about the acting was the sense of scale. The stakes were high. The play deals with major issues—bigger than life—and the actors played it like it was Shakespeare."

Costumes, designed by Marilyn Skow and Marina Pareja, are historically accurate Elizabethan dress with colors, trim, texture and material selected to fit each character. Dark Lady and Lawrence Fletcher, for instance, are richly dressed throughout, while the growing prosperity of Shakespeare and the actors is reflected gradually.

The action is continuous without black-outs. Sets and lighting, designed by Douglas Molash, show a bare stage with a players' wagon from which the actors take crates and trunks and other props to create various locales. At the end of the play the actors pack up the wagon for Will and Anne's trip from London back to Stratford, leaving the stage as it was seen at the opening.

Playwright Leroy Clark, Chair of the Department of Theatre and Dance at Florida International University, is the author of 25 plays and the recipient of numerous awards including the Tennessee Williams/New Orleans Literary Award, a Shubert Playwriting Fellowship, a Kennedy Center Fellowship, and the Salt and Pepper Mime Company National Award.

Tickets for Shakespeare's Journey are offered at a reduced rate of $8 to all who register for the SAA meeting (see page 8 of this bulletin). The SAA has reserved a limited number of seats for the performance, April 14 (Saturday) at 8 p.m. The Wertheim Performing Arts Center, Main Stage, is located on the corner of Southwest 107 Avenue and Coral Way on the Florida International University Park Campus, which is a thirty-minute drive from the Hotel Inter-Continental. Vans will be available at no cost for transportation between the hotel and the theatre. An after-performance discussion with the playwright/director is planned.

Ayabonmbe

The Twenty-Ninth Annual Meeting will close, as it has thirteen times before, with the sublime and ridiculous SAA/Malone Society Dance. Ayabonmbe, lauded by the Miami New Times as the "best Haitian band" around, promises to make this year's dance a memorable one. Five percussionists and a fire-eater form the core of Miami's own Haitian supergroup. Ayabonmbe's far-reaching rasin music fuses the trance-inducing rhythms of Vodou rites with reggae, rap, soul ballads, and pulsing ra ra,—the music of Haitian Carnival street processions. Lead vocalist Kiki Wainwright and his Vodou posse sing ballads and political anthems in both Creole and English. Be there or be square. (Leave the chickens at home).

Tickets are $15 in advance, $20 at the door. A cash bar will add to the festivities.

M IAMI

■ NEIGHBORHOODS

SOUTH BEACH, reputed to be one of the most glamorous places in the Miami area, is easily accessible from downtown. Built up in the early 1930s as a place for Northerners to escape the cold winters and the Great Depression, South Miami Beach (know as South Beach or SoBe) is a 23-block area on the southern tip of Miami Beach. The architecture is intentionally whimsical—a collage of Art Deco, streamlined Modern, and Spanish Mediterranean—revival styles adapted to the South Florida climate. Of the famous Art Deco Historic District Leicester Hemingway writes: “[when] people needed to let go...they became wild on Miami Beach...they didn’t watch their nickels. You would think nothing of ordering something you couldn’t pay for because you’d figure, ‘Maybe they’ll carry me or maybe I’ll wash dishes.’ Architects were determined not to use any older styles like the Spanish...they didn’t quite know where they were headed; but they wanted something modern, so they smoothed out all the Spanish things. They smoothed the balconies, they smoothed everything until you got the feeling that life was smooth. The buildings made you feel all clean and new and excited and happy to be here.”

People are still happy to be here, as much for the glamorous people-watching as for the architecture. Whether sitting at a chic sidewalk café is your pleasure, or roller-blading down Ocean Avenue to watch the sunset, South Beach is a must. (For tours, and information on the Art Deco District call 305-672-2014).

BAYSIDE MARKETPLACE, a colorful, attractive network of stores, restaurants, and bazaars on Biscayne Bay, is within easy walking distance of the hotel. Fun for the whole family, this tropical indoor/outdoor mall teems with stalls offering wares of various kinds, and national chains include Brookstone, Victoria’s Secret, The Limited, and The Gap. Bayside is easy to find, safe and clean, with plenty of sheltered, if slightly costly, parking. Sunset cruises around the bay are also available from Bayside.

COCONUT GROVE, Miami’s former Bohemian quarter, is today a cosmopolitan mix of expensive shops, trendy bars and restaurants, sidewalk cafés, and upscale galleries and boutiques. Although not as outrageous as South Beach, Coconut Grove offers people-watchers a good dose, and for those who prefer the company of trees, the Grove’s giant ficus tempt the possibility of a green thought in a tropical shade.

CORAL GABLES has a concentration of the best restaurants in Miami and is an affordable taxi ride from downtown if 4-5 people share. One of America’s first planned communities, Coral Gables is a fascinating town filled with gorgeous, Mediterranean-style homes, manicured lawns, and lush foliage. The layout, however, resembles a maze, with street names in Spanish written on small white stones at ground level that are hard to read. As a result, it’s easy to get lost. For people inclined to wander, though, this classy old neighborhood is perfect for exploration by foot or bicycle.

■ OUTDOOR PLACES

KEY BISCAYNE, off the Rickenbacker Causeway between Miami and Miami Beach, is where the rich folk live. It also has some of the best beaches in the Miami area—most of which are open to the public. On the five-mile-long causeway that links the Keys, visitors can pull over, park, and rent sailboats or jet skis for zooming around the placid waters of Biscayne Bay.

BISCAYNE BAY

Sight-seeing cruises of various kinds leave every hour from Bayside Marketplace for one-hour excursions around placid Biscayne Bay. Most spectacular of these is the sailing tour on an 85-foot topsail schooner, the Heritage of Miami II. Two-hour sails depart at 1:30 p.m., 4 p.m., and 6:30 p.m. daily. The cost is $12 for adults and $7 for children under 12. One-hour sails depart on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday at various times. Call ahead for specific schedules on weekends. The price is $7 per person. For more information call 305-442-9697.

VIZCAYA Museum and Gardens, one of South Florida’s majestic treasures, is the site of this year’s Opening Reception. Built by American industrialist James Deering in 1916 as a winter home, Vizcaya was designed to reflect 400 years of European history. Deering wanted the house to resemble a 16th-century Italian estate that had been occupied and renovated by several generations of a family during that time. Not surprisingly, and with every detail in mind, it took more than 1,000 workers over two years to complete. Of equal splendor are the formal gardens that combine to awesome effect the elements of 16th- and 17th-century Italian hill gardens with those of 17th-century France.

Now a National Historic Landmark and museum of the European decorative arts, Vizcaya provides a unique experience for visitors wanting to retreat into another world. For those who can’t make the Opening Reception on Thursday evening, tickets and information are available by calling 305-250-9133.
